MRS. FLEMING'S LETTERS.

TWO OF THOSE WRITTEN TO WILCKES READ IN COURT.

THE PROSECUTION ENDEAVORS TO PROVE A MO-TIVE FOR THE ALLEGED CRIME BY THEIR CONTENTS-COURT ADJOURNED BECAUSE

The trial of Mrs. Fleming was continued yesterday in General Sessions, Part III, before Recorder Goff. The principal interest in the day's proceedings was centred in the reading of the defendant's letters to Ferdinand Wilckes. Through these letters the prosecution sought to show that Mrs. Fleming committed the crime of poisoning her mother in the fear that unless she should obtain the money willed to her by her father, and so hold out substantial inducements to Wilckes to remain at her side, he would sever the relations existing between them. In the letters Mrs. Fleming also spoke disparagingly of her mother, MRS. FLEMING'S LOVE FOR THE WITNESS. DIFFICULTY IN GETTING WILKES TO IDENTIFY THE DEFENDANT'S WRITING-ADJOURN-MENT UNTIL MONDAY.

A casual visitor to Recorder Goff's court yesterday would have found it almost difficult to comprehend from the nature of the proceedings that a woman, accused of the crime of matricide, was on trial for her life. The greater part of the day was taken up with argument as to the admission as evidence of the letters sent by Mrs. Fleming to Ferdinand Wilckes, and the identification of the letters. Finally only two of these were read. One of the essential points of the motive put forward by the prosecution for the alleged crime, was that Mrs. Fleming, in the summer of last year was in fear of losing the man on whom she had centred her affections, and that in the wish to influence him and keep him faithful she was willing to go to any length. In these two communications, indited by Mrs. Fleming, she not only exhibited a deep feeling for Wilckes, but referred, without the least attempt at reserve, to the intimacy that existed between them, and held out to him many substantial inducements, even to the extent of the whole fortune that was coming to her, to continue their relations. In getting these letters before the jury, the prosecution undoubtedly secured an advantage, inasmuch as Mrs. Fleming did not forbear to disparage the Bliss family, and to refer in particularly acrid tones to the attempts of her mother to part Wilckes and herself. THE PROVING OF THE MOTIVE.

The proving of the motive that animated Mrs. Fleming to seek her mother's life, as alleged by the prosecution, is the last phase of the People's case. It was decided on Thursday that an extra session should be held last night to complete the prosecution's testimony. The court had only continued, however, about half an hour beyond the customary time for rising, when Charles Sam, Juror No. 3, complained of being seized with a billous attack, and, consequently, the further sitting of the court was abandoned. Ferdinand Wilckes resumed his seat on the stand upon the opening of the court yesterday morning, and for upward of an hour was kept occupied in identifying letters which had been sent to him by Mrs. Fleming. The letters had been procured from him by Inspector McCullagh. Wilckes exhibited the same unwillingness as on the preceding day to answer questions put to him by Mr. McIntyre which might in any way be construed as unfavorable to the defendant. His deportment on the stand was extremely exasperating to the prosecution. When a letter was handed to him for the purpose of identifying the handwriting of Mrs. Fleming, he would read it through carefully from beginning to end. dozen, at least, closely written pages, and when sary, as a preliminary to recognition of the defendant's writing, to peruse the letters from end to end, he flatly refused to identify a single one unless he read every word set down therein. To the surprise of almost everybody in court,

Mr. Brooke refused to cross-examine Wilckes, but it is understood that he will be called later as a direct witness for the defence.

UNABLE TO FIND MRS. REYNOLDS.

Mrs. Reynolds, around whom so much mystery is enveloped, and who did not respond to her name on Thursday, was again called yesterday. In the mean time an attachment had been issued against her, but the officer to whom the process had been handed for service returned to court and explained that he was unable to attach Mrs. Reynolds, because he found the house barricaded, and was unable to obtain admission. John C. Shaw, one of Mrs. Fleming's counsel, was called as a witness by Mr. McIntyre, and after recognizing the decree of the Supreme Court, in the action brought by the defendant to substantiate her claim to the money willed to her, by her father, contingent on Mrs. Bliss's death, he was asked if he had ever received any money from the City Chamberlain as the representative of Mrs. Fleming. Mr. Brooke objected to the question, but Mr. McIntyre persisted in his inquiry, and said that the simple object he had in view in calling Mr. Shaw was to prove the fact that Mrs. Fleming had benefitted under the decree of the Supreme Court. Mr. Brooke then contended that as counsel for Mrs. Fleming, the witness, by his professional relations with the accused woman, was precluded from answering any question regarding his relations with his client without her consent. The objection was overruled, and thereupon Mr. Shaw admitted that as the representative of Mrs. Fleming he had received a sum of $21,000 from the Police Inspector McCullagh was recalled for the purpose of identifying a bundle of letters found in the possession of Ferdinand Wilckes and written by Mrs. Fleming. He said that he received the letters from Mr. Wilckes at the latter's office, at No. 10 John-st. Wilckes on Thursday testified that the Inspector had entered his office without a search warrant, but McCullagh denied this, and said he went to the John-st. office with a search warrant issued by Judge Alli-

Dr. Bullman was also recalled. Mr. McIntyre's purpose in putting Dr. Bullman on the stand egain was to introduce the dying declaration made to the physician by Mrs. Bliss. A long argument took place between the opposing counsel us to the competency of the evidence, Mr. Brooke's contention being that there was nothing to prove that Mrs. Bliss knew she was in imminent danger death. Ultimately the Recorder decided to hear the witness rehearse his testimony. After learning that Mrs. Bliss expressed a conviction that she was going to die, and that she knew she was going to die, the Recorder permitted the Witness to repeat the dying woman's declaration, but prefaced the granting of the permission by monishing the jurymen to pay no attention "to any part of what they should hear, except such part as the Court should instruct them to hear." Dr. Bullman then made the following answer: "She said she was going to die. She said: 'A relative sent me some clam chowder and a piece of pie to-day, and within ten minutes after I had eaten it, I began to vomit and purge, and it made me deathly sick; but I had no one to send for a doctor.' I asked her why she suspected this relative, and her reply was: 'Well, because this relative will inherit a large sum of money at my death.'

Numerous objections were raised by Mr. Brooke against the admission of this declaration, and by piecemeal various words were expunged until in the end nothing was left but the sentence: "I know I am going to die."

MR. CARVALHO ON THE STAND. such part as the Court should instruct them to

MR. CARVALHO ON THE STAND.

David N. Carvalho was called as an expert in handwriting, after recess. Through the wit-put forward by the prosecution. He said:

It shows a desire on the part of the defendant to acquire the wealth she was entitled to on the death of her mother before the due order of things. Although the will provided that this money was to come to her only on the death of her mother, this letter shows that the defendant was making unusual efforts to get her money, and even appealed to the Legislature. And then the improper manner in which she makes reference to the death of her mother in that letter also tends to establish the motive. Anything that tends to show strife, discontent and trouble between the slain and slayer is proper and competent to prove a motive, and it seems to me that there is evidence in this letter tending to establish the motive.

tending to establish the motive.

Mr. Brooke objected to the reading of the letter, and contended that there was nothing in the leter that indicated the presence of any such circumstance as described by Mr. McIntyre. There was, he said, not a syllable in it that showed any ill-feeling between the defendant and her mother. Nor was there any suggestion as to greed for money or any reference to money with the exception of one instance, where mention was made of endeavoring to obtain a special enactment of the Legislature.

The Recorder asked for the letter, and, after reading it, sustained Mr. Brooke's objection. Other letters were offered in evidence by Mr. McIntyre, but before ruling on them Mr. Goff carefully perused each communication. Only those letters which contained references to Mrs. Blies he allowed to be read to the jury. The whole of the afternoon was taken up in this pursuit, and only two of the numerous letters offered in evidence were permitted by the Court to be placed before the jury.

PART OF A LETTER.

PART OF A LETTER.

The following is an abbreviated copy of the first one read:

Dearest Ferdinand: Excuse me for writing so often to you. I hope my notes do not cause you any annoyance. I simply write first because I wish to let you see I do not forget you (underlined) like you seem—at any rate—to forget me, and second because you treat one in such a peculiar manner. If my friendship is not worth anything to you, and my society not worth the seeking, and, is fact, I myself not worth the trouble of enduring a little, talk from relatives on both sides; talk, words, which actually cannot harm either of us and which you could stop instantly by simply refusing my name to be discussed with you—a very simple matter, and only requiring a little decision of character. I mannage so now, in this house with these people that they do not discuss your name with me at all, and if they tell you so they simply lie to draw you out or into conversation about me.

I do not for the life of me see why you should care. After all, you cannot think much of me if you are not willing to endure something for my sake. All the talk in the world does not prevent you in seeing nic, and let it be your own business—your private affair.

You do not try to see me, Ferdinand! You make me affair.

You do not try to see me, Ferdinand! You make me unhappy for the sake of others, when I think more of you than all of them do put together. I feel dreadfully hurt at your treatment.
I do not like to give my affections to you if they are not desired, but so I have never understood from you, on the contrary, just the opposite. I believe you are fond of me from what you have told me, and the way you have treated me until lately, and I am happy in so believing.

you are fond of me from what you have told me, and the way you have treated me until lately, and I am happy in so believing.

But what good does it do me if you keep away from me like you are doing now. If I am laboring under a mistake, and my society is no longer desired, will you be kind and polite enough to tell me why? For I outside of this family an used to being treated with consideration and politeness, and tell me why and how I deserve to be treated thus and my feelings hurt for no cause.

I have done nothing to your relatives, and I ask nothing of them, and do not for one moment consider them at all in any affair of mine. They are simply prejudiced and resentful. I have no one to blame but Alfred's own foolishness and mamma's silly tongue. At any rate I am done with this Hilss family once and for all, absolutely through. I mean just what I say. I have been arranging my plans in regard to leaving here for some time, but I have always taken my lawyer's advice, as he ought to know best.

NOT READY TO GO AWAY.

NOT READY TO GO AWAY

This week I could not go as I intended, because I time to entirely newly paint and paper it, as they desired to rent it before putting in thorough order, and I have just leased it. I do not think it healthy to move in until paint and paper are thoroughly dry. I say nothing, keep my mouth shut about having leased it—even have not told Flo, although she knows something about it. She does not know all yet. I felt very much hurt at you last eve. Oh! Ferdinand, when I went out for your sake in the pouring rain, too. Felix has stood waiting for me several times in the pouring rain. He told me you promised to treat me better, and not mind all the fuss. Well, of course, just as you wish.

I have no wish to intrude upon you or your time, if I am not desired, and I beg parion for intruding now. I have plenty of friends who will stick by me through fire and water, and I can get plenty of admirers who will take me to the theatre and spend plenty of money on me. Mr. Jones thinks a lot of me. Only the other day I refused to go out with him on your account, because I care more for you.

I can't for the life of me keep my folks, or yours. to move in until paint and paper are thoroughly you. I can't for the life of me keep my folks, or yours, either, and I for my part don't care a "D" for all of them put together in a bunch. ... money is King, that's certain. Bah! I don't give any of them even one moment's consideration. I re-no one here. It is all O. K., and so now you even give another name, and see me whenever wish. Yours, lovingly, ALIC

The second letter which Mr. Miller read to the jury contained at least 1,500 words. In its pages Mrs. Fieming professed the same wealth of affection for Wilckes as demonstrated in the foregoing communication. She spoke also of her foregoing communication. She spoke also of her fears that Mrs. Bliss would succeed in separating them, and that there was a vast amount of treachery in the Bliss family. She asked him to distrust the unfavorable gossip that was invented concerning her (the defendant), and added that she knew her mother to be a mischief-maker and a woman whose word was not to be believed.

SHE OFFERS HER FORTUNE. Further on in the letter Mrs. Fleming taxed and "Miss B.," and fearing that these women would win him from her, she beseeched him to give up their society, and offered, if he would do so, to give to him every cent of her money when she got it. She pointed out as a further inducement that with the money he might inducement that with the money he might branch out into some lucrative business, or retire from work altogether, and that his life might be spent in pleasure and idleness, if he would only continue his relations with her. The rest of the letter was devoted to criticisms of the Bliss family, and Mr. Miller laid special stress on the final part wherein Mrs. Fleming predicted that the time would soon come when she would be able to cease having anything further to do with them.

she would be able to cease having anything to ther to do with them.

At about half past 5 o'clock, after the reading of this letter, Charles Sam, Juror No. 3, com-plained of illness, and the Recorder thereupon adjourned the trial until Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

EXECUTION AGAINST DR. SCHEELE. Deputy Sheriff Butler yesterday received an execution for $167 in favor of Lehn & Fink against walther T. Scheele, of No. 76 Elm-st., the expert who testified on the Fleming murder trial.

THE DEATH OF MISS COUSENS.

CORONER HOEBER ORDERS THE ARREST OF

MRS. STEVENS, WHO TREATED HER. Coroner Hoeber had the witnesses in the Leonora Cousens malpractice case before him yesterday morning. They were Dr. Anna C. A. Stevens, who attended Miss Cousens; Mrs. George Wickes, who keeps the boarding-house at No. 4 West Twenty-seventh-st., where Miss Cousens died; and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Miller, who have known Miss Cousens from her childhood.

Miss Cousens's father is a retired builder at Noroton Centre, Mass., and is a man of some wealth. Miss Cousens had been a professional singer for five years. Before joining the profession she used to sing in a church choir.

Mrs. Wickes repeated her statement to Coroner Mrs. Wickes repeated her statement to Coroner Hoeber about Miss Cousens becoming sick at the breakfast-table on last Tuesday. Before that time she was apparently in good health. After having a talk with Mrs. Stevens, Coroner Hoeber placed her under arrest, fixing her ball at $5.000. The Coroner let her go out in custody of a policeman in search of ball. Mrs. Stevens denied that she knew the real cause of Miss Cousens's sickness when she was treating her. Mrs. Stevens furnished $5,000 cash ball, and was released.

SMITH ELY, JR., OPPOSES THE SITE. Smith Ely, Jr., one of the Park Commissioners, expressed the opinion yesterday that it was not at all desirable that the city should acquire a whole or a part of the triangle at Fifth-ave., Preadway and Twenty-third-st. for a public park. The suggestion of the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument Association that this triangle would afford a fitting place for the proposed new monument which that body has in charge, was disapproved by the Commissioner.

Speaking of the matter, Commissioner Ely said:

"There is danger of bankrupting the city if we keep ness the prosecution sought to identify certain letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Pleming through comparison with the proved signature of Mrs. Fleming appended to the petition made by her to the Legislature in her effort to secure possession of her money before the death of her mother. The witness testified that the letters shown him were in the handwriting of the defendant. After identifying the first letter shown him the prosecution asked permission to read it to the jury, but Mr. Brooke protested against such a course.

Mr. McIntyre urged that the admission of the letter was essential as tending to prove the motive put forward by the prosecution. He said:

THE RAPID-TRANSIT PROBLEM.

MANHATTAN PEOPLE NOT DISPOSED TO DEFER

day: "The proposed extensions of the Manhattan-Elevated system will certainly not be made according to the idea as publicly expressed by Mayor Strong. The issue might better be joined at this time than at any other. The suburban line, in which we expended $4,500,000, has never paid more than its operating expenses, and the dividends which have been paid on that portion of the road have been taken from the earnings of a more remu-nerative part of the system.

"Mr. Strong understood, from our several conferstockholders of the Manhattan Railway by putting large sums of money into a territory which cannot for a long time to come, return a revenue. Our two main contentions are that we be permitted to improve the facilities of the elevated road, beginning downtown, thereby increasing our earnings s that we can build into the country, and a complete release from 95 per cent of the property-owners against damages along the line. Mr. Strong agreed that he would use his influence with the property-owners in getting this release."

George J. Gould said: "We are going to do all we

George J. Gould said: "We are going to do all we can to provide rapid transit, but I do not think we ought to be asked to build into sections not yet settled. We have every desire to meet the demand of the public for transportation facilities, but it would not be wise to build lines where business for them does not exist."

Rapid Transit Commissioner John H. Inman said: "From Mr. Sage's statement regarding extensions, and the positive stand taken by the Mayor, it looks as if much progress could not be made just now. The Commission, however, is willing to take the matter up. It requires a three-quarter vote to grant the franchies. There is one vacancy in the Board, in view of this the five members who might possibly reach an understanding, independent of the Mayor, would be powerless to settle the matter."

LOCAL BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Deputy-Sheriff Williams yesterday received an ex-ecution from Rockland County against Andrew J. & William Y. Provost for $17,628, with Interest from A judgment for the above amount was obtained on October 1, 1883, and was affirmed by days ago. John C. Provost, another defendant, died on January II, 1884.

The Olympia Cub, of No. 117 West Thirty-secondst, yesterday confessed judgment for $1,121 in favor of the New-York Brewerles Company, of which $1,000 is for money loaned to the cub on January 4 and $108 for lager beer sold to it since then. The cub was incorporated as a social cub on December 19, 1895, the president being John Heilly.
